Firefox 42 This review is part of a series of reviews for 360 Total Security program. 360 Total Security program is listed in Program categories Internet.Q: Set string value in a JavaScript object I'm a bit stuck here on this problem. I want to set a value from a text input using JavaScript. I need to pass an object with a url, firstname, surname, and a text value. I can't use JSON to set the text because I need to use this.name, but I do not know how to set the value from a HTML input using JavaScript.

window.onload = function () { window.onload = function () { document.getElementById('inputFirstName').onchange = function() { setValue(window.onload, document.getElementById("inputFirstName").value); document.getElementById("inputFirstName").value = window.onload; } } }; function setValue(window.onload, firstname) { window.onload = { firstname: firstname, url: "", surname: "" } }; I hope someone can help me. Thanks in advance. A: Use.value instead of.value= var input = document.getElementById('inputFirstName'); window.onload = function () { window.onload = function () { document.getElementById('inputFirstName').onchange = function() { setValue(window.onload, document.getElementById("inputFirstName").value); document.getElement
