So in the first tutorial in Rocket League I got a vehicle that has two front wheels and one back. I ended up trying to do a regular rocket shot, and it was extremely awkward. So I decided to ditch the front wheels, but then I got the next tutorial and felt the same exact thing. This wasn't a problem for the tutorial, but I can't do anything other than reset. I was wondering if just dropping the primaries will affect you in any way. A: Primary/secondary are what I'd call a mere visual distinction and are not related to the vehicle's physics. Having only 1 front wheel would actually result in a worse performance than 2 (you'd have less traction). It's because the front wheels are the primary driving wheels that move, if there's only 1, they won't be moving as fast. Source (in the case of a physical difference, but from the same wiki page) Sýslum (Finnish: Ústánd byggverk) is a well-known Finnish residential architect, contractor and house builder.
