The question i always have in my mind is why i should upgrade to Windows 8 when most of the people are hating it and its features are something they don't really want, but the comparison with Windows 7 is not like my previous experience at all, i was running Windows 7 on my computer since 2005 and it worked pretty good and i still like it, until i thought it's time to upgrade from Windows 7 to Windows 8. so i bought an ultrabook with Windows 8 and started my testing for a week and i don't like it, and i couldn't really see a reason why i should use it over Windows 7, besides a few UI changes and the new improvements in Windows 8, nothing really caught my attention or made me want to switch to Windows 8, until i started using it on daily basis and started hating it, everytime i try to launch a application i want to switch to Windows 7 but when i found out there's no way to make this work i gave up, so i needed to get back all my files from my ultrabook then i realized that i didn't backup my entire system to a backup device like i always do in my Windows 7, so i decided to backup my system and i found out that most of the applications and system files (program files and registry) on my ultrabook and all data on my SSD is not backed up when i bought it, only a few files was backed up (1MB size files) and my Windows 7 backup device is a lot larger than my ultrabook volume so i decided to back up my ultrabook data to my Windows 7 backup device and i'm glad i did because it was taking me a lot of time and money to backup my ultrabook and i was willing to do all the things to get it back, but i failed with getting all my files back, i changed my mind many times and tried different things but it doesn't worked at all, so i decided to just install Windows 7 again and try to get my ultrabook data back with the Restore system partition tool that's installed on Windows 7 installation iso file, well that's what i found out that Windows 7 can't read all the data from my ultrabook, i found the data in my ultrabook is encrypted and Windows 7 can't read it, well now i need to find out how can i decrypt my ultr
