We have none of the squawkiness and faux-pop-punk of Glee Club, no Beatles or Rolling Stones, no Grateful Dead, no Beatles or Rolling Stones. But what we do have is a confident assurance that life is unpredictable, that the next song is going to feature a jazzy riff, a fun-loving lyric. "I happened to glance up, and there it was, staring at me from the front page of the Crimson. There it was, as vivid, as real, as ever." That is true of so many things, it has to be said. In this case, McBride continues, "I hurried to my dorm, and put on a casual tracksuit. I decided to visit Glee Club."
