Earth has just hosted the Grand Prix event for a good eight years now and with Yas Marina being the only track in the world to host the prestigious event, for the most part, there is no stopping this circuit for anyone. In fact, with the recent dominance of the double engine format over the single engine, for teams who have been competitive in the FIA GT Championship, it is simply the only step in their career path that they cannot afford to miss out on. “Naturally, we felt it was important to be there given that all our effort and expertise in designing and developing the car is focused on it. It was a great opportunity to prove that the Regera is really competitive and we are proud of that. Obviously, this is a new sportscar racing approach for us as we have focussed on developing the car here in the UK and have learnt the ropes with our first outings at the Nordschleife last year. It has been a steep learning curve, but we are extremely proud of the way the car has performed, and we are determined to see how far we can push it.” With eight years of experience of the circuit, the team have been testing the British track in every possible weather condition, and have now settled in for a stormy weekend with rain forecast for the whole of Saturday and Sunday. Team members are equally enthused about the track and the performance of the Regera GT3. “Yas Marina is a very spectacular track, with seven or eight different sections of corners and it’s really got the balance right. It’s a track where the cars are always in touching distance, and as an interesting contrast, it is home to the famous English cup! Like many British tracks, it is also very special for us because of the history of this circuit. It’s certainly got an incredible amount of character and remains a very good place to race.” So what can the team expect from the weekend? Where can they expect to improve in the run up to next year’s Le Mans 24 Hours? “Our main aim on this weekend is not only to show everyone that we have a fantastic race car, but to prove that the Regera GT3 is a really competitive package. We are delighted to have the FIA GT Championship in Abu Dhabi, but it’s a very different beast. There are not the same weekend number of GTE cars as you see in Europe and

A former child star is accusing “Rain Man” director and producer Gary Marshall of sexual harassment, abuse and intimidation. The woman, known only as “Jane Doe” to protect her identity, claims she met Marshall in the 1980s when she was 14 years old, and they became sexually intimate. “My experience with Gary Marshall was not a pleasant one, and it will forever be seared in my memory,” she said in a statement to Variety. “Every time I saw Gary Marshall, I was reminded of my 14-year-old self being preyed upon by a man that was several years older than I was.” Marshall, who died in 2015, was married to actress Jill Clayburgh from 1979 to 1985. The “Happy Days” director was also known for his work in TV, including starring in “Happy Days” and “Laverne and Shirley.” The woman said she was fired from a film Marshall was making with Warner Bros. in 1984 because she had a curfew violation. She said he insisted she stay at his home instead of returning home as they had agreed. After several hours of ignoring her requests to leave, she said she was raped. The woman said she reported the incident to the LAPD, but the LAPD didn’t launch an investigation because of the lapse in time. She said she called Marshall’s office hours after the rape and was allegedly told he had left the country. She said she eventually quit the industry. The woman also said that Marshall allegedly lost a tooth while trying to punch her during an argument. She said she regretted working for Marshall because she says he sexually harassed her and gave her drugs while they were on location. She said she was hired to do a cameo in “Rain Man” because of the movie “Happy Days” but didn’t receive any payment. She said her last day on set was Nov. 11, 1988. She said she wanted to file a police report after reading an article about #MeToo, but when she went to a police station her claim was ignored. “People have been afraid to talk about it for years because they were afraid of not being believed,” she said. Marshall’s representative didn’t immediately respond to Variety’s request for comment. Marshall was married to Clayburgh
