MRZJW3 SETUP151E Setup: Set and adjust the range of in-shaft and out-shaft position.Q: Join process, is it a deadlock? There is a main process and a sub-process. The main process is a session that can be idle, but can be running, by clicking on a button. The sub-process executes a series of methods that are supposed to work offline in an isolated thread, until the main process, when stopped, is supposed to restart it and the sub-process process returns back to the main process. To work offline the sub-process creates a new thread and executes methods in a loop until the main process is killed. At the end of this process the sub-process can be deleted. Here is the code for the main process: public class MainProcess { private List subProcesses = new List(); private bool isSubProcessRunning = true; public void Stop() { Console.WriteLine("The main process has been stopped."); isSubProcessRunning = false; } public void Start() { Console.WriteLine("The main process has been started."); while (isSubProcessRunning) { foreach (SubProcess subProcess in sub 3da54e8ca3
