The feedback is impressive, for sure, but I'm really interested in what the feature set of the PS4, Xbox One and PC versions will be like. Here's what I can confirm so far. Speaking to the developers at EA Sports, I was told that there were three key pillars to "HyperMotion" - the ability to intelligently run around the pitch and manipulate the ball, the speed with which players and the AI react to and perform the ball mechanic. So the first two things are basically related to the speed with which the game reacts to user input, so it can interpret the user's intent and translate it into a players movement; and secondly, how fast a player can react to an event or react to an event. Both factors are key elements of the reaction in-game speed. So how fast the game reacts to user input and how quickly the players react to the ball. The first aspect of the first pillar will be crucial in defining how the game plays. But how will the game react to the user input? Well, it will be the first time that an EA Sports game has had "Intelligent Running" on a home console. The game will be able to react to the user's intent - either a run, dribble, pass, shot or pass and potentially reflect this information on the pitch. The underlying principle here is to give every gamer the possibility of running and dribbling their way around the pitch - the more fluid and fluid the game is, the better off the gamer will be. So it's not just about dynamic positioning when running and dribbling, but how the game understands the gamer's running style - when the gamer likes to increase their running speed or change direction after a change of pace? We will have more on this feature and EA Sports in the weeks ahead, so stay tuned.Q: SQL Grouping data conditionally in SQL I am trying to group my data by a condition and to then then append the data to tableA and delete the original. FIFA is back on PS4 with FIFA 22. Whether you're the best in the world or looking for a new challenge, FIFA is back. Football's greatest moments and biggest stars come alive in FIFA. The next evolution of the long-running series, FIFA 22 introduces fundamental gameplay advances and a new season of innovation across every mode to bring the game closer to the real thing than ever before. A Champion creates history. In FIFA 21, the new Create a Player feature brought players to life as digital gods. Now, the game is going deeper, creating truly believable, living, breathing characters. Players are all unique, built like no other and are fundamentally different in real life from one another. Based on the player's real-world appearances, over 500 different customizable attributes can be explored to create a player that is like no other. Learn your opponent better than ever. Every player in FIFA has their own unique demeanor on the pitch, be it arrogance, confidence, toughness, technique or guile. In FIFA 21, players become more aggressive in-game, taking the ball on with more physicality. They drive at defenders and block shots with a confidence befitting their real-life counterparts. An all-new Tactical

Intelligence system sees players better understand their opponents in the blink of an eye, and new Defensive Intelligence includes built-in contact prediction and the ability to recognise and adjust to specific skills and attributes. Screens edge in realism. FIFA takes on new dimensions. Created in-house at EA Redwood Shores using EA SPORTS Ignite, games have never looked better. The new LOD (Level of Detail) effects and high resolution textures bring the game to life like never before, and the new directional occlusion system creates more realistic environments. The world reacts on the pitch. Sound waves in the stadium give the sense of being in a live stadium. When a goal is scored, a wave of the crowd erupts around the pitch. An all-new stadium soundtrack creates a truly immersive experience, while crowd noises and reactions—including heat maps—provide the most refined crowd reactions in the business. Pick your broadcast team. Just like real life, the broadcast team can make a difference. Improved pacing and an all-new in-game commentary system will help make sure your broadcast team has the best view of the action. They can call in real-
