The Checker nameplate had already fallen to the wayside at the end of the 1960s, and this seller states that the car is in "perfect" shape and runs and drives. The stock tachometer and gauge cluster have been replaced with a fiberglass dash, but it is otherwise fully restored. Recent service included new spark plugs, transmission, brake pads, rotors, and a radiator, clutch, and frontend suspension bushing, and no work was done to the body. The manual windows and doors open with ease, and a new undercoating and tire inflation were also performed recently. This is not a show car, but a driver! The original seat was ordered as standard equipment with the Monza and was fitted with a matching cap. As a seat option, the Australian '68 Monza seats could be ordered with plastic shims instead of the original springs and padding. This Brazilian Matching case included both seats, the original dash, and the original 1963 Ford emblem, which is shown on the deluxe "A" package on the original window stickers. The bumper is restored according to specifications, and the chrome covers are new. The engine and drivetrain are said to have been rebuilt and are said to run smooth and strong. Checker Marathon IIs were constructed in London, Ontario, by the Anticipating Automobile Co., from February 1963 through September 1966, according to the National Championship Guide. The delivery of the first Monzas occurred in April of 1963 and just four cars made it to the Canadian market. A total of 2,545 Monzas were imported from the US and Canada from June 1963 through September 1966, according to the book. Exterior photos by Joseph. Interior photos by the seller. So,

I have an element with an id of "greet_msg". I want to parse the data from an xml document and write it to the innerHTML of the element. The problem I am having is that the variable I am passing to the function is not getting written to the innerHTML. It is instead written to the console. I was following this stackoverflow post: Rendering function to innerHTML, but the answer does not describe why the function is being printed to the console, I think it just simply doesn't understand how to get a function to render.

I also noticed that he did not parse the xml file in the example, I was trying to do that as well. I have read a lot of questions relating to this topic but am still stuck. `var txt = "Hello World";`
`function reply(msg) { document.getElementById('greet_msg').innerHTML = msg; }` `var reply =`
`function (msg) { var content = document.getElementById('greet_msg').innerHTML = msg; }` `reply(txt);` The above is the simple example of how I am trying to implement this. It basically gets the data and tries to write it to the innerHTML of the "greet_msg" element. A: Try this: `var` `reply = function (msg) { var content = document.getElementById('g`
