It's important to find resources that work with your particular software and are the best fit for your needs. If you're just getting into Photoshop, Adobe has a thorough online training library and books that can help you get started. Is there a one-size-fits-all national standard on? I ask because I hope to adopt a new standard for student teaching next year that may be different from what we have been doing. I am the Head Pre-Kindergarten teacher and also the Head Vinyasa Yoga teacher. I am in a pivotal moment in my life: I am young, 22. I do not want to be the first to end my career. I know that nothing lasts forever. I want to do what I love doing and this is it. I want to be happy and continue to evolve. I have some basic ideals in mind, for example, yoga poses should be done in a specific order to be beneficial. I love teaching and I want to be as “yogic” as possible. I will also be teaching another teacher at my school this year who is moving back to the US after graduating in Australia. He is older, still young, and just teaching English in Australia. He has come to take lessons from me so that he can teach Yoga in schools in the US. I am considering taking a semester off and working full time in the US with him. I could learn more about the K-12 system from his side. I would enjoy taking some time off from teaching to focus on learning more about the K-12 system. I know that I have two options: go back to college, or apply for teacher certification. I am a little overwhelmed. I would love to hear some of your thoughts on this. I feel like I will make a move once I get a little more clarity. Well, you have a lot of option for what I would consider option A – especially if you would only be taking a semester off. It would be nice to hear more from you. It seems like you are a little unsure about what you want to do and who you want to be. That is a tough transition for anyone. I believe the best thing to do is to decide upon the job you want and apply for it. That is what most people do. Unless you are a student, most college programs won't allow you to just drop in and out of classes willy nilly. If you do decide to take a few classes, make sure you pick classes that are directly related to what you're planning to do. If you decide to put your money towards learning, here are a couple of resources to help guide you: I agree
