User interfaces AutoCAD is available in a number of interfaces, including a command line version and DOS-based (MBASIC) version called XD8 (also known as AutoCAD 8). AutoCAD also has an X Server-based (Xdummy) client which provides a high-level interface similar to a graphical X client. Its scripting API makes it possible to write GUIs for AutoCAD using, for example, Perl, Java, C, C++, and Tcl. In early 2007, AutoCAD was also released on the iPhone with the AutoCAD Mobile App, allowing for creation of 2D and 3D drawings and reports. A new methodology for the assessment of functionality of modular bone-anchored hearing aid systems. A new and reliable method to determine the effective dynamic range of bone-anchored hearing aid systems has been developed. The method is based on measurements of the amplitude-weighted sound pressure level spectrum of the wearer at the preauricular skin around the receiver unit, the result being that the effective dynamic range is given as the spread in dB between two points of equal sound pressure level. The method was validated in a clinical study with five adult users of bone-anchored hearing aid systems (BAHA). The results show that the effective dynamic range of the BAHA systems is in the range of 45 to 60 dB, depending on the skin site. The results show that the BAHA systems are not only a successful medical solution, but also a superior hearing aid, the speech understanding in noise of the implanted hearing aid systems is in the range of 45 to 60 dB.A simple procedure for the site-directed mutagenesis of the human calcium/calmodulin-dependent protein kinase II beta-subunit gene.
