Still more particularly, the present disclosure relates to adjusting query results based on search term relevance and semantics of the search term. Users of electronic devices, such as computers, may search a local data repository (e.g., a database of information) for desired information. For example, a user may use a search engine to search the database for desired information. The user provides a query or set of search terms to the search engine, and the search engine provides a list of search results. The list of search results may be presented to the user as a ranked list of one or more search results. However, conventional techniques for ranking search results are focused on relevancy and may not account for semantics.Abington Friends School Abington Friends School (or Abington Friends School) is a Quaker school of around 350 students in grades 6-12, in Abington Township, Pennsylvania, United States, just east of Philadelphia. Founded in 1790, it was the first Quaker boarding school in the country. It is a school within the organizational structure of the Abington Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) in Pennsylvania. After the Religious Society of Friends voted to allow girls to attend the college-level Friends Seminary, the Abington school also allowed girls to attend in the latter part of the 19th century.
