What's new in Of Guards And Thieves - Hunting Grounds:

and House Rules I would say there are both guards - and thieves. You are a sneaky, organized, maybe even intelligent, (I was thinking about a couple even, minis can get bland), individual. But sometimes, you just also happen to be surrounded by a pack of wild dogs. Generally they get involved the moment something happens and ruin things. The first duty of the guard is to protect the house and lawns, (the garden if you want to be fancy), that the thief can't get to. I always want to have the guard with the thief inside the house. I always expect the robber to be driven away by at least one guard or better preferably two. I don't wait for the guard to return with the robber. I expect the guards to return home and then make sure that the thief is not about to disturb the house. Typically, once he is caught, he waits until 3 o'clock to leave. A guard is a character that takes damage when there's a character inside and they're simultaneously hit by an attack. A guard player usually, before engaging the robber, asks himself how much damage the job is worth and what he can win by accepting a lower level. (If he takes damage, he must raise the level and then manage to get the job done in the allotted time.) A guard must choose their target based on the damage value of their character. Obviously the better the character, the more effective the guard. The best character for the job is a scout and a fortune teller, a fighter, whichever gives the best chance to be successful. If necessary one player uses 2 characters of one faction to perform a guard task. The thief, (who is not a beserker) uses Stealth Action to sneak behind the guard while he is putting out or warning level. Then, he attempts to complete the job in a fraction of the time while the guard unsuccessfully tries to check the situation. Most times, when a guard is down, they lose some intelent skill level. Typically there is an attack directly after the skill level is lost. When this attack is finally thrown at the guard he is almost always knocked down and then cowering. When this happens, the thief takes time to reload. Typically, at this point, the guard feels that he might as well be at home watching TV. The player playing the thief then uses two melee attacks (if necessary) to defeat the guard. It's based on the A Dungeon Cook's Guide
