As part of that preparation, I need to become a follower (and apply for green card / visa) in US consulate. I am a US citizen currently living in the UK. I am planning to apply for green card and I am also planning to reside in the UK. I am told there is no need to become a follower for the green card application. However, I am also hearing (not from US consulate directly) that becoming a follower will help getting a visa faster. I am open for all suggestions. Do I need to become a follower to apply for the visa or can I wait till I arrive in the US? A: You do not have to become a follower, but you do have to get the appropriate application forms from the consulate. There is no convenient way to get these forms online. You might be able to find them at your local post office, or possibly at the US Embassy in the UK. Otherwise, you can probably get them from a local lawyer. Or, I suppose, from the consulate directly. (After searching and failing to find anything online, I e-mailed e79caf774b

There are always dust and debris all over the kitchen including on the countertops and around the doorways. It is true that it is the germiest room in the house since many meals are prepared in the kitchen and a lot of dirty dishes come in and out of the kitchen and it is all very much normal. There are a lot of ways that you can clean and sanitize your kitchen and that will help your family stay away from germs and disease for quite a long time. The key to clean a kitchen properly is to avoid cleaning the kitchen all at once. That is a lot of work for you to perform at once, so do not do it. Instead
