1.10.2 The Layers The term _layers_ refers to a collection of stacked elements and instructions used to create and alter a composite image. For example, the tree in the image in Figure 1.11 may have one layer with the tree as the image and another layer that describes the colors, patterns, and textures that you want to add to the image. Figure 1.11 A composite image with three layers. This layered system enables you to create, edit, and alter an image and to have one element change without affecting other elements. For example, if you place a pattern layer on top of a tonal image layer, you can manipulate the pattern's colors without affecting the underlying tonal colors. A _layer_ is a type of band or zone in which you can perform all the operations that you perform in Photoshop. Photoshop stores all image layers separately as files called _layers_. Any new layer you add to an image is stored in a different file. Figure 1.12 An arrow on the layers toolbar enables you to move the order of a layer stack. There are seven different Photoshop layers you can use to create a composite image: Background, Channel Mapping, Clipping Mask, Layer, Noise Reduction, Pattern, and Pencil.

Murine RAW 264.7 macrophages and human THP-1 monocytes produce a novel alkaline phosphatase. We have previously reported that alkaline phosphatase (AP) synthesis and secretion are induced in RAW 264.7 macrophage by lipopolysaccharide (LPS) treatment. Here, we compared AP production by RAW cells with human THP-1 monocytes after LPS stimulation. We found that RAW 264.7 cells constitutively express mRNA for AP. Cells stimulated with LPS produced a series of AP isoforms with apparent molecular weights ranging from 105 to 190 kDa. We also identified the endogenous substrate for AP by [14C]alpha-N-acetyl-L-aspartyl-L-glutamate (NAAG). The substrate affinity of the mammalian APs differed from that of the bacterial enzyme [Formula: see text]. Unlike mammalian AP, LPS stimulated growth of Bacillus anthracis cells in vitro. We also found that THP-1 cells produce AP activity that exhibits a similar MW range of the macrophage AP. An extracellular exotoxin of B. anthracis, the protective antigen (PA), stimulated the production of AP activity in both RAW and THP-1 cells. Moreover, antibody against PA abrogated AP activity. Thus, our data suggest that RAW 264.7 macrophages and THP-1 monocytes produce distinct sets of APs with similar MW, although their origin and regulation are different.Q: O_EXCL never works on Windows?
