►DESIGN: The "game" board is made of 3x3x3 cubic blocks. You can rotate and move them. ►MARKETPLACE: Buy and sell the blocks (interact with them). ►POLICY: The center of the board contains a prison where players catch others who have been shot by their opponent. Players start the game with only three pieces (but they can buy more blocks). ►LOCATION: Track the game board and you can navigate it. You can teleport (but you need to take a step to do it) and you can walk (but you need to take three steps to do it). ►GAMEPLAY: As the game board contains the whole game, you can use the entire board and move all the pieces at the same time. You have the chance to drop and catch the blocks using the arrow keys on the keyboard. The blocks can be readied for an easy pick up by pressing the "B" key. You can hold the block and play it later for a gain of money. You can use the mouse too. Players must flip the wheel of fortune and shoot with the Russian roulette to earn money. The more coins you have, the more you can buy and interact with the blocks. To do this players need money or "keys" to buy the blocks. You can earn money through game goals. For example, to get more coins, you can play faster, be the first to win auctions, or be the best in one of the three game modes (SOLO, Pass 'N Play or Online). ►MAGIC: Rento Fortune VR is live multiplayer (online vs real people). With this version you have the possibility to interact with your friends as well as family using one HMD (the VR headset). Why rento? Game design company has launched VR/AR games for many years. In our opinion, today's new technologies (VR and AR) have the potential to unite people around the world playing online against each other. Why VR/AR? VR has the potential to enrich your daily life and expand your horizon. It is the first step into Virtual Reality world. In the world of advanced technologies we live in, VR/AR is the game that will leave you speechless. One day we will be able to enjoy games just by putting on our headsets. In terms of imagination, there is no limit

Exo One Features Key:

- A horrifying, low-fantasy world.
- Heroes with badly-defined and poorly-tied-together motivations.
- Bullet-hell action on a massive scale.
- Realistic combat. You shoot to kill.
- A super satisfying nonlinear storyline.
- Numerous endings. All very bad.
- Over 100 hours of adventuring time for up to 4 players.

Can Civilization Be Stopped? Can Civilization Be Stopped? Can Civilization Be Stopped?

That a civilisation is out of control is so simple a claim that it would hardly pay homage to a complex argument. It's a sign of how we are raised as philosophers not to look for explanations or watch for patterns, and it's exactly the same with the countless other 'solutions' and 'alternatives' floated in favour of attempted breakdowns of the current order of things. We all like too see a viable alternative through, and the more contagious it is, the more we can be immune to the infernal condition of civilisation, the paradox of perpetual abundance it breeds in its crowd, society.

Subscribe for more great content: The UndergroundWorld - a huge mine with only smoke and steam! The rescue team (engine driver) enters the hot, vast cave at the mine's end (37.5, 22.5). After the rescue mission, the tunnel collapses, and the engineer continues to drive forward (37.5, 67.4). Hideout (34.2, 95.7) is entered on foot, (18.2, 115.4) - on all four sides. Deep under the surface of the land, in the largest cave of the world, - in the heart of Siberia, four brave men are working. From the mining hub of Russia's Far East, 120 km from Khabarovsk, the most feared cave in the world, - the Kuznetsk Malinovskaya, or Kuznya Polyana mine, - the toughest cave in the world, and the biggest gold mine in the world - the town of Polyana. The first underground rock caravans from the secondary deposits of the Kuznetsk coal basin began to be mined in the region in 1965, and in 1968, the first shaft was registered, the following year in 1970 it was followed by a large number of shafts, a petit- and gros-détente. The mine suffers greatly in the cold and has a limited number of heating pipes, ensuring that the earth is strongly tremble. Steam rises from cracks in the rock into the mine and creates the atmosphere that the mine is indeed a giant living organism. There are over 600 people - workers and managers - mining coal for the Kuznetsk Coal Company. In other parts of the mine are not to be seen only, but also vehicles, housing, a pipeline and more than just steam and smoke. From the ventilation in the depths of the mine emerge signs that some life exists in the darkest place in the world. What's new in Exo One:

Copper Dungeons is the dedicated site for the campaign I am running, "Curse of the Crimson Highlands"! Check out what we're doing, and please feel free to post here with questions or comments. In this journal, you will receive automatic donations if you do not have other bank accounts attached to your profile. Additionally, when you "Rewards" other members as a Dwarf Rogue, you will receive those donations if they do not have any other bank accounts attached to their profile. If a Ruby Knight has angered you, please let them know and tell them that you don't appreciate being spoken to in such a fashion. If they don't like your response, they will likely show you their own anger and attack you. (They can only attack you in these circumstances if your reputation number is less than 7, of course). To the right of the journal page, a box will appear with the graphic image associated with each type of donation you have in your account. When you send a payment to another member, the box will appear with the person's name in the field. In the clickable field, you will see the donor's name and emblem graphic. A security notice will pop up when you attempt to send a donation. That doesn't mean it won't work, though, so just click OK. If a member is blocked for any reason, please come here to attempt to restore their donor status.

Monday, September 21, 2006 Last night on Bravo, there was a game of Seven Minutes in Heaven (it was called The Girl Next Door -- I wish I had a chance to see that show). A few people involved in the show saw my parting statement to Hellrunner, and mentioned how well it was constructed. Hellrunner got so excited that he was able to chat on the phone for more than an hour. I had mentioned a few days earlier my plan to do a kind of training/preview to prepare Hellrunner for his upcoming game. Readers of this blog might remember that I have been talking about this sort of thing for the past 18 months or so in this space. After reading his game preview, I think Hellrunner has some skills, but I think he does need some help with rules etiquette. I hope he takes some of what I'm going to teach him and then, when he's ready, posts his own game. It may be a while, though. Too many times

There are no limitations to the creativity. We hope you will enjoy the result of our creativity, we have tried to make the game one of a kind, like you won't find anything like it on the Internet. We have struggled with the concept for over a year, trying to make something like the genre we like. With its dark and serious atmosphere, it is an excellent example of graphics modification to a genre. Game was created using Unreal Engine and graphic editor Cinema 4D. It runs on Windows and DOS. Ask HN: Sharing with a coworker my idea (2) - azizsaya HN, There is a lot I'm confused about the sharing idea, but I'll start with a few questions for the community. We've all read the "Startup Checklist" but I find it hard to apply the lessons to me and my coworkers. - Will my idea work (i.e., be capable of making money)? - What are the risks? - Should I speak with someone from the industry (e.g., friends, etc) to see if they believe the idea is worth pursuing? - Do I need to speak to someone to make sure I'm not violating an existing patent or trademark? - Do I need to patent it or trademark it? (e.g., I thought I read somewhere that a doctor should patent his discoveries, but that may not be the case -- confused) If this sounds like a good idea for others, we would be honored to host the shared-idea community at our company. We have a Slack channel, forums, and the whole process takes only 1-3 days, which is not long for some people. ===== argonaut I would not say a blog post is a good idea. ~~~ azizsaya I think you misunderstood the point. In my case, I don't want to make a final decision, but I'd like to share my idea with my coworkers. Blog post with commentary would be the best way to share my thoughts with them, but I think that without feedback from you and myself, it would be very hard to speak concretely on the right next step to take.
