We're testing out the most exciting elements of the game today ahead of its release later this month. We'll be unpacking the results from our deep dive into the HyperMotion tech and publishing more impressions and reactions as we see how it plays across a wide spectrum of FIFA Online 4 modes. First impressions We kicked off our first dive into the new engine and new gameplay today with a pre-release version of FIFA 22. Right now it's not final, but it's certainly close to being ready for a full release later this month. All of our opinions and first impressions are subject to change after the final game is released, and we'll update accordingly when we get the full version. For an early look at what's coming, here are a few of our first impressions. We went hands-on with the new demo a couple of weeks ago, and you can check out the game's full trailer above. Main Menu "FIFA Online 4 - Episode 1" is a series of gameplay stories set in the FUT universe. The new demo takes you through the first episode of the three-part campaign. The first thing you see as you enter the game is the main menu. The options are the same as last year, but there are a few new features we can see over the course of our gameplay story. You get to play an online match, and you can also do a quick offline or split-screen mode game. The new play options allow you to go into a more advanced FUT session. You get to play a full FUT game, all 4-on-4 matches in a season and all 4-on-4 matches in a week, as well as training matches. All of the 4-on-4 matches in a season require you to have a collection of the best players from around the globe. The 4-on-4 matches in a week let you pick your favorite tournaments, such as the Champions League, UEFA Super Cup, FIFA Club World Cup and more. To access these options, you can either use the FUT hub, enter the play menu and click on the new players tab to play a full match, or you can open the 4-on-4 matches directly from the main menu and go into advanced mode. To start a 4-on-4 match, you select one of the best
