As an example, if I had a site like: Is there a way of setting this up so that all of these pages are SSL'd, but still let them be accessed as the site's "Home" page, etc? A: Put your example.com pages in the same host as www.example.com with no other configuration and you should be good to go. As long as the web server is serving files from the same physical location that the SSL will be serving them from, it won't matter which host they were originally served from. Q: Javascript - how to find number of characters within a string? I need to know how to find the length of a string within the code. I am looking for information on how to find the number of characters within a string variable? Example: var message = "test", length = 5; I would like to use javascript to echo the variable 'length' A: You can easily get the length of any string with the length property. document.write(document.body.children[0].length); and the string to get the length of is: document.write(document.body.children[0].innerHTML); For example: 648931e174

A: It works perfectly for me, and is for 64-bit, 32-bit and 64-bit Python 3.7.1, on Windows 10. You should try to install xforce with pip3 (for Python 3.7+) as it is the preferred method if you are using Python 3.7: pip3 install XFORCE You could try to do pip3 install xforce and which could install the version of xforce for Python 2 or pip. However, as stated by you, you probably are missing an important dependency, which is numpy, that should install in command line: pip install numpy Then try again to install xforce with pip3: pip3 install XFORCE And start building your project with the command line: python -m xfordinternal.build-artifacts You can build this with command line and with Visual Studio Code with the command line, but I don't know how to set the options in Visual Studio Code to build directly from the command line. So, you can use the following commands from the command line (PyCharm) in Visual Studio Code: pip install numpy pip3 install XFORCE pip3 install xford python3 -m xfordinternal.build-artifacts But if you use Visual Studio Code, you need to set the enviroment variables and you need to open them from your window (see the screenshot below): This is a screenshot of the Visual Studio Code enviroment variables: Then, from the command line, you can see the build output: You need to add the text below in your build output or you will see this error: Error: [Errno 2] No such file or directory File "C:\Users\user\AppData\Local\Temp\pip-install-fw8mf1j9 umpy umpy\f2\src\parsestr.py", line 62 in _parse_function_wrapper "zero" in f2 or "errno!=" in err) File "C:\Users\user\AppData\Local\Temp\pip-install-fw8mf1j9 umpy umpy\f2\src\parsestr.
