I want to know if it is possible to do a client-server application with C++ and direct internet connections. Like: Windows: - user-interface - user is allowed to start a program that runs in the background with no user interface. The program receive the input from keyboard, etc. And Internet: - the user-interface is shown to the users and he is allowed to give input to the client program in the same computer where the server (the program running in the background, without user interface) runs - the program in the background receive the input from keyboard, etc. A: C++ is a general purpose language. It can be used to do pretty much anything. One thing you can do with C++ is write an application that can be used as a server or client. The C++ code can interact with the user interface of the application and receive input. But you would have to do quite a bit of work to add a server functionality to the application. Q: Angular 8 Vuejs Clear search results after post (GET) I have an angular app and a vue app, the vue app gets the data from the angular app which is fetched via GET, then the POST operation happens. Now when i click on submit, the post should automatically clear the search results, and it works perfectly in vuejs, but i need to clear the results through code after the successful POST operation. I am currently in the process of applying for jobs and have my first official interview lined up for later this month (at a marketing firm in the UK). My job would involve managing a number of other people's accounts/projects. I have less experience in this area than some of the people I will be working with and would be learning on the job (which is great). I am a little uncomfortable with the prospect of having to go negative in an interview as I have found that being assertive and robust has served me well in the past (I've worked in various places at both the large and small end of the spectrum). How should I go about this interview? A: Focus on your own skills - the chances are that you will have a lot more control over your projects than the people being interviewed. You are always in control and always responsible for any problems that arise. The interviewer will be looking for what you are responsible for. You can talk about these things: Previous failures and successes in the area. Anything that you are responsible for and more particularly your ability to get the project done. Communications within your organisation and the reasons why people are not as competent as you think they are. How you deal with problems, whether you are a problem solver or a maker of problems. The interviewer will expect you to be detailed and be able to talk about specific points. They
