Android app and sharing ID to YouTube, Facebook and Twitter.The Internet Exchange Points (IXPs) can be considered the last remaining physical infrastructure to support the growth of the Internet. The IXPs are the points where traffic is exchanged between networks, which enable end hosts to effectively reach connected networks for data exchange. Traditionally, data exchange between networks across an IXP was done by point-to-point connections, involving the exchange of control/management information as well as data traffic. Traffic exchange is now evolving towards the use of standardized protocols to enable traffic exchange without any explicit knowledge of the internals of the data exchange mechanism. Commonly used protocols in transport networks, such as TCP, UDP, and IP, have been re-architected to fit in Internet Protocol version 6 (
