Console For JEdit (2022)

Console for JEdit is a simple plugin that allows you to easily compile your scripts and view the generated errors and warnings. The plugin perfectly integrates within JEdit application and enables you to compile the selected code script or run the last specified command. Also, you are able to add new command-line tools. If you find any issues, please share your experience. The Console 2.0.0b4b is now available to be downloaded. Some of the new features includes a new preferences dialog, a new status bar, error and warning highlighting, history editing, and more. This update adds a preferences dialog to define a range of rows, and columns in which to highlight error, warning, and info messages. The new status bar has more options such as button type, initial position, and window background color. The history editor allows you to edit the current entries of the history window. Two new functions are added: Function LoadXmlFile() and Function MainEditor() The function MainEditor() loads and executes a command. The loadXmlFile() function is useful to read your xml files, in this case the error_log.xml file. This file contains a list of warnings/errors. The Console 2.0.0b4b is now available to be downloaded.
