Apacer BL651 Bluetooth Wireless.Q: Python: Is there a way to check if a library is installed? I'm using Python 2.6.6 and Windows 7. I'm new to Python and would like to know if there's a way to check if a library is installed. I'm trying to use the urllib module to pull some data from a web site. Sometimes the site isn't available so I get an error. Is there a way to just check if the library is installed, like in C? A: Is it possible to build urllib with Python 2.6? If it's not, you could put something like this in your code: try: import urllib.request except ImportError: print "urllib is not installed" exit(0) If it is possible to build with Python 2.6, you can try this code: try: import urllib except ImportError: print "urllib is not installed" exit(0) if hasattr(urll
